

Henna Inam is an experienced C-suite executive, board member and a certified executive coach with 15+ years of experience coaching Fortune 500 C-level executives and their teams. Her unique expertise is in helping her clients become more aware of both their core strengths and their potential derailers. She helps her clients use neuroscience-backed tools to shift beliefs and behaviors that stand in the way of success and collaboration. With over 20 years P&L impact including in roles such as Region President for the Americas, Chief Marketing Officer in Fortune 500 companies (P&G, Novartis), she enjoys being a strategic thought partner for clients.

A global leader, Inam has lived and worked in seven countries on four continents. She has served for seven years as an independent board director for Engro Corporation, a $1B publicly traded company. As the chair of the Board People Committee, she stewarded talent, C-level succession, compensation and employee experience. She also served on the audit committee stewarding advancements in enterprise risk management. With strategic-thinking and brand-building capabilities on multi-billion dollar global brands, Inam has a proven track record of driving innovation with strong financial and people impact.

During the course of her career at Novartis, Inam held many leadership positions, most recently having served as Global Head of e-Innovation, in which she led a community of leaders across Novartis business units and functions to drive digital disruption. Prior to this role, Inam served as Chief Marketing and Innovation Officer of CIBA Vision, (a Novartis subsidiary) and as President of the Americas with P&L responsibility of over $600MM. Previously, she served as General Manager of Gerber Products Company in Mexico, where her team's business turnaround earned them the Novartis Performance Excellence Award. Her experience includes stints in sales leadership where she was responsible for key client relationships including Wal-Mart.

Inam is the author of two leadership books, "Wired for Authenticity" (2015) and "Wired for Disruption" (2020). She is also a contributor to Forbes with a focus on leadership and careers. She serves on the Board of Trees Atlanta, the Board of Counselors for the Carter Center and was the founder of TEDxWomen in Georgia.

Inam received her BBA from the University of Texas at Austin and her MBA with a focus in Finance from The Wharton School at University of Pennsylvania. An avid learner, Inam completed three Executive Education in Leadership programs at Harvard Business School and completed a Directors certification at Stanford University. She regularly builds on her executive coaching certification by incorporating neuroscience-backed practices in her work with clients and teams. Inam currently resides in Atlanta, Georgia and loves hiking and global travel.
